TO

Their moſt Honoured FRIEND,

Mr. JAMES STANIER,

MERCHANT IN LONDON.

SIR,

THE great Care and Paines which Sig.r GIO: TORRIANO hath taken in ſetting forth the following VVork, hath juſtly entitled him to a Right of making his particular Dedication thereof; which he hath done, To the Right worſhipful Company of the Turky Merchants, whereof you are a worthy Member: But the intereſt we have in the Copy (as from the time of our purchaſe of it, wee ever intended) wee here moſt humbly offer to YOUR SELFE. For to whom can we more fitly preſent a Dictionary of a Forraigne, and eſpecially the ITALIAN Tongue, then to You, by whoſe favours, and ready complyance, at all times, with our Occaſions, our affaires have had their Foundation, and are ſtill carryed on in Forraigne Parts, but principally in THAT COUNTREY.

SIR, This Volume would ſwell to too big a bulk, if this Epiſtle did containe but the Catalogue of the Obligations, which in the ſeries of ſeverall years You have heaped upon us; the ſenſe whereof hath hitherto been confin'd within the bounds of our owne Breaſts. VVe beſeech you give us now leave to make publication of them to all the VVorld, and to be ſo juſt as to endeavour, that not only in ENGLAND, but in the PARTS BEYOND SEA, where your Correſpondents have daily experience of our Engagements to You, there may be perpetuall Monuments of our acknowledgments of them; and that our Gratitude may travell as farr as the uſe of this Book will carry it. VVe confeſſe theſe are but meane returnes for ſo great Courteſies, but being the effects of our gratefull diſpoſitions and reſpects, wee hope may finde Acceptance with you, which is onely aimed at in this DEDICATION, By

Your moſt Humble, and moſt Reſpectfull
Servants,

JOHN MARTIN.
JAMES ALLESTRY.

THE PREFACE.

WHEN the Rarities of Italy (that Paradiſe of Art and Nature, that Academy and Garden of the World) do dayly call ſo many of the Engliſh Nation, and Forraigners, from all parts into it, when its excellent Books do travell into all Nations and find Univerſall Eſteem; and when all Merchants that traffique into the Levant, muſt Trade by that Language, it would be ſuperfluous for me by a Studied Diſcourſe to invite any to the Learning thereof: And the uſe of a Dictionary, in order to its attaining, is ſo obvious to all underſtandings, that it would be impertinent to demonſtrate its neceſſity; I ſhall therefore only give the Peruſer an Account, in ſhort, of this preſent Edition.

In the Year 1611. JOHN FLORIO ſet forth a ſecond Edition of his Italian and Engliſh Dictionary, which for Variety of Words was far more Copious then any extant in the World at that time. This, notwithſtanding being defective, and other Dictionaries and Italian Authors coming to his Hands, he collected out of them an Addition of many thouſand Words and Phraſes, relating to Arts, Sciences, and Exerciſes; intending (if he had lived) a third Edition, which he left behind him in a very fair Manuſcript, perfected and ready for the Preſſe.

This Manuſcript I have diligently peruſed, and in very many places ſupplyed, out of the generally approved Dictionary of the Accademici della Cruſca, and ſeverall others that have been ſet forth ſince his death. I have likewiſe much corrected the Engliſh Interpretations, and (where there was cauſe) reduced them to their genuine ſenſe, as they are now uſed in theſe Modern Times. There wanted yet a Dictionary Engliſh and Italian, which I have compiled by my owne induſtry, and added to it ſeverall Proverbs and Inſtructions ſtructions for the learning of the Language; So that I queſtion not but now this will be the moſt compleat Italian-Engliſh-Dictionary that ever yet hath been publiſhed, and that all ſuch as ſhall apply themſelves to the Study of this Noble Tongue, will find in it all neceſſary helps, and expected Satiſfaction. For my own part, I ſhall account theſe my Labours well employed, if they ſhall be accepted by the Engliſh Nation, for whoſe ſervice I have ſpent the greateſt part, of my time, and to whom I ſhall perpetually be,

A moſt Humble and devoted Servant,

GIO: TORRIANO.

An Advertiſement.

Whereſoever this Aſteriſme * is placed before any word, it ſignifies, either that all ſuch words are not to be found in M^r. Florio's laſt Edition of his Dictionary; or that there is an alteration and addition in their Interpretations: But theſe Aſteriſmes (by over-ſight) in ſome whole Letters, and very many places, are omitted; Of which the Reader is deſired to take notice, and to judge of the Additions in this Dictionary, as upon peruſall he ſhall find juſt cauſe and Reaſon.
